The aim of this project is to address the shortage of skilled workers, to strengthen links between small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), education and training providers and other interested parties and to increase the proportion of women in technical occupations.

Contents:

- establishing a network of stakeholders to tackle the issues of skills shortage and women in technology
- promoting cross-border dialogue on these issues
- improving gender parity and the acceptance of women in technical occupations
- developing and testing an innovative service package for SMEs (experimental course modules in the fields of metal and electrical engineering, energy engineering, IT and process-oriented robotics, company visits, workshops)

The concept of education for sustainable development (ESD) is an approach that integrates ecological, economic and social competences. Such an approach calls for a considerable broadening of the scope of curricula in vocational education and training. The project aims at developing suitable didactic and methodological concepts in the fields of transport / logistics and care as well as open educational resources.

This project is about assisting care workers and other caregivers, especially in coping with dementia sufferers. One aim is to provide online and blended learning materials on this topic. Another aim is to give the subject more attention in carer training. A special focus is on carers who want to work in home care, as they act as multipliers. In addition, the project results should contribute to improving the situation of older people in need of care and provide essential support for their relatives.

The field of continuing vocational education and training (CVET) in Europe has changed dramatically over the past 20 years. In order to meet the new challenges and the European requirements in continuing vocational education and training, the core competences of CVET trainers are to be strengthened, especially their teaching skills, as these directly affect the quality of continuing vocational education and training.

This project is designed to raise the awareness of health care experts for the importance of intercultural competences and to equip them with these competences in a non-formal way. Intercultural competences are seen as a part of professional health care services that contributes significantly to patient satisfaction, successful treatment and the prevention of disease, and promotes physical and mental well-being. The project targets all types of health professionals (such as doctors, psychologists, midwives, health care staff and pharmacists).

This project is aimed at reducing dropout rates in schools and VET and limiting their human and financial cost. More specifically, it focuses on improving the effectiveness and efficiency of work-related learning and teaching through job coaching. A framework describing necessary key competences is being developed as a basis for a training programme for job coaches, whose task it is to support vulnerable young people. At the same time, the project helps employers provide traineeships and apprenticeships.

A major goal in this project, especially for the Bulgarian lead partner, is to strengthen and improve the competences of trainers in companies. Key activities are developing and testing a curriculum for training future trainers and creating and utilising an internet-based platform for trainers and companies that take on apprentices. Besides, training programmes based on the dual VET principle are to be developed for skilled trades jobs in construction, the wood / furniture industry, metal technology, tourism and ICT, and a future search conference on the topic of dual vocational education and training as a new opportunity for companies and young people is to be organised.

This project targets refugees (minors and young adults aged between 18 and 25) who have applied for asylum or have been granted subsidiary protection or asylum. It is the largest VET project for young refugees in the province of Salzburg and includes vocational orientation, preparation and education and training. The aim is to give young refugees the opportunity to take up apprenticeship training and enter the job market.

Participants who have completed compulsory schooling or who have a very good command of German can acquire theoretical knowledge and practical skills in the metal, wood, catering and hospitality industries and in retail trade. In cases of outstanding achievement, learning outcomes may be credited towards the first year of apprenticeship in the respective trades.

Training is delivered five days a week, comprises approx. 38 hours per week and consists of four days of practical instruction (at St. Gilgen and in the city of Salzburg) and one day of teaching theory (at BFI Salzburg). Throughout it is accompanied by social pedagogical counselling.

This project offers the opportunity to get an apprenticeship qualification in the following roles / trades: office administrator, logistics operative, retail sales, metal technology (with a focus on welding technology), waiter / waitress, cook / chef and large goods vehicle driver / passenger transport driver – bus, coach. This list may be added to as required.

Following an initial interview, job-related knowledge, skills and competences are recorded in a portfolio and assessed in a first qualification check. Subsequently, specific training is provided to fill any knowledge or skills gaps. Finally, the Apprenticeship Office of the Salzburg Economic Chamber conducts a second qualification check to evaluate the success of the upskilling. If the qualification requirements are met, an apprenticeship certificate is issued.

This project is specially geared to young people who need to catch up on basic, social and personal skills. The aim is to promote individual growth and to help participants prepare for vocational education and training or continue their schooling.

The project is implemented at two BFI training venues in the province of Styria, Spielberg (Murtal) and Murau. It consists of three modules: getting started, orientation and training and specialisation, and rests on four pillars: practical training (with a focus on woodwork, administration and office work), coaching, skills workshops (for acquiring basic, IT and life skills) and sports.

Promoting and facilitating refugee employment is central to this project. It aims to develop a simple method for determining the newcomers' knowledge, skills and competences based on ECVET principles and learning outcomes, to speed up the assessment of qualifications in the host countries, to make suitable career planning easier and to design tools for documenting skills, e. g. a "Refu-Pass".

WORKPLACEMENT VI Berufspraktikum im Ausland

Programme: Erasmus+
Project number: 2016-1-AT01-KA102-016427
Project period: Jun. 2016–May 2018
Contractor: BFI Wien

In this mobility project, students in commercial schools run by BFI Vienna have the opportunity to do a three-week work placement in companies in Hungary, the Czech Republic and Slovakia during their school holidays. A total of 45 persons are scheduled to take part in the project. The goal is to boost personal development, employability and participation in the European labour market. The students are specifically prepared for their stay abroad, also with regard to the languages spoken there. On returning from their placement they will receive the Europass Mobility document.
